SENATOR TRINKLE'S SPEECH

mediately following the Civil War, and that it was the Democratic Party which has ever since consistently and unflinchingly fought for the maintenance of white supremacy in Virginia and for Virginia's advancement along all lines tending to secure and promote the social, political and material well-being of the people. In this campaign, then, I shall base my claims to the confidence and support of Virginia voters upon the record of the Democratic Party as it is revealed in State and national public policies and accomplishments, as well as upon my own pledges for true and tireless service. But I shall not be content with this. I shall inquire of my distinguished Republican opponent: What of the record of the Republican Party? He is a candidate of that organization, and in complete political sympathy with it, both in the nation and in the State. He has accepted the leadership under the full knowledge that in so doing he assumed unconditional responsibility as a Republican candidate for office, and that that responsibility inevitably requires from him a candid response to the question: What has the Republican Party done, or ever sought to do, for the benefit of the Virginia people? What has the Republican party in the nation ever done or sought to do for Virginia that would benefit Virginia, make more secure the bases of her civilization, and promote the happiness of her people? What has it ever done or attempted to do in the days of its power, that was designed to lead the State out from the shame and shadows consequent upon the merciless Republican plans and policies inaugurated and continued for many years after the Civil War?

As yet Colonel Anderson has shown no disposition to discuss this phase of his party's career. Quite the contrary. When opening his campaign in the historic town of Lexington, he took occasion to explain rhetorically the sentiments which drew him there. He had a care, however, not to explain why and how it was that the Republican Party in Virginia had once sought, through the Underwood Constitution, to disfranchise and decitizenize Robert E. Lee whose honored tomb was in close distance of the speaker's stand—to disfranchise every man who had followed the fortunes of the Confederacy, and who gave the tribute of loyalty to its cause. One has only to think of the dead Captain of the Confederate hosts, there ensconced, and the principles he represented, and the heroic legions which followed him in war, and the millions who have since loved and honored his memory in peace, in order to conclude that Mr. Anderson might well and more appropriately have chosen some other Virginia community in which to support the Republican party in the present campaign. Perhaps it was some subtle consciousness of this incongruity in the situation that caused the Republican candidate in his keynote address to make no allusion to the record of his party. For it is a fact easily verifiable, and already verified, that in that speech, covering more than thirteen closely printed columns of newspaper space, Mr. Anderson made no reference to the Republican record. He did not extol it. He did not show willingness to stand upon it. If silence meant repudiation he sought to repudiate it. Or if silence was indulged with the hope and purpose that it might cause the people to forget the Republican record, then a political play was attempted which was as feeble in conception as it will prove futile in effect. The Republican Party has a record, and I propose as the standard-bearer of the Virginia Democracy, to hold its candidates to the record. As suggested by the Lynchburg News:

"In his (Colonel Anderson's) keynote campaign speech he ignored the Republican Party. Why? Can Mr. Anderson be ashamed of his party that it pleases him to ignore its record? Can he be ashamed of his political flag that he does not proudly wave it? Does he stand humiliated and ashamed in the presence of the history and traditions of his party that he does not rely upon them, or ever suggest them as reasons for his election? If so, surely he cannot expect the Democratic voters of the State to share such shame, to consort with him in his humiliation, to take up partnership with him in an alliance which he does not care to extol."

Democratic Railroad

Phila., Sept. 28.—Committees consisting of equal representation of the employees and of the management have now been established on Pennsylvania Railroad for the settlement of all controversial questions affecting approximately 120,000 employees. A new basis of understanding between the management and these employees is now in effect. On their part the employees recognize that all differences should be and are capable of amicable settlement. On the part of the management effectual recognition is given to the right of the employees to have a voice on equal terms with the management in matters affecting their welfare and working conditions.

With the train and engine service employees this arrangement, embodied in the joint reviewing committee has been in effect since January 1, of this year. A method of amicable adjustment similar to this joint reviewing committee has been worked out by the representatives of the management and the representatives of other classes of employees.

The group includes in the new arrangements are:
Train and engine service, maintainance of ways and structures, signal department, mechanics' helpers and apprentices, maintenance of equipment and telegraph and telephone Eastern region, clerical forces Eastern region and miscellaneous station forces Eastern region.

For each of the first three groups a system reviewing committee, constituting a court of review upon all questions that may arise between the management and employees affected, is now in effect. For each of the three other groups a regional reviewing committee has been established.

The questions to be taken up by these committees include grievances, rules and working conditions, and the administration of discipline. The votes of all members, whether representatives of the management or of the employees are of equal power. Not less than two-thirds vote is necessary to reach a decision upon any question presented.

In all matters except individual discipline cases the full committee will vote and its decisions will constitute precedents which will be binding equally upon both sides with respect to similar existing of future cases. In discipline cases which involve a personal element, the representatives of the management and the representatives of employee directly interested in the case merely act as counsel for the presentation of their respective claims and do not vote on the case.

A method of appeal to the division superintendent, general superintendent and general manager is provided so that all cases which cannot be settled on division may receive expeditious attention by the reviewing committee. Regular meeting dates are fixed for the division superintendents, the general superintendents and the general managers to meet representatives of the employees under their jurisdiction and appeal may be taken in this order, the employees participating in every step in decisions affecting their interest.

The formation of these committees carries out the policy announced on May 20, 1921, of giving all employees an opportunity to have a voice in the management in matters affecting their welfare. Following this announcement elections were held throughout the system to determine the employees' choice of representation to formulate new rules and working conditions to take the place of the national agreement.

It was announced at that time that it was the hope of the management that these employee representatives would form the nucleus of committees which should frequently confer with the management on all matters, concerning the employees. Accordingly, as soon as the new rules were agreed upon, the employee representatives and the management held a series of conferences which resulted in the formation of these committees.

The system reviewing committee for the employees on maintenance of way and structures is composed of eight representatives of the management and eight representatives of the employees, two from each region.

The system reviewing committee for the signal department is made up in the same way.

The regional joint committee for the shopcraft employees of the Eastern region is composed of seven representatives of the management and seven representatives of the employees. The regional joint committee for clerical forces in the Eastern region is composed of six representatives of the management and six representatives of the employees.

The regional joint committee for the miscellaneous station forces in the Eastern region is composed of five representatives of the management and five representatives of the employees.

The chairman of each committee alternates between a representative of the management and a representative of the employees.

Do you discriminate at the dining table—or are you thoughtless?

In thousands of homes, a "line" is drawn at the breakfast table. Tea or coffee is served for "grown-ups" and Postum for children. But some parents do not discriminate. Caffeine and tannin, the injurious contents of coffee and tea, seriously retard the development of the delicate nerve tissues in children.

Consequently, instead of rich, satisfying Postum, children are over stimulated by the drugs in tea and coffee; and so may grow up irritable and nervous. Any doctor can tell you that this is a great evil and should be corrected.

Although some parents feel a certain justification for the personal indulgence in coffee, yet the harm to them may be equally serious. It may take a little while longer for the drugs in coffee and tea to affect an older person, but in many cases the nervous system and allied bodily functions will become weakened. The surest way to avoid such possibilities is to quit coffee entirely and drink Postum instead. The change permits you to get sound, restful sleep.

Postum is the well-known, meal-time beverage. Like thousands of others you will like it because, in flavor, it is much like a high-grade coffee.

Do away with the distiction at the table. Serve delicious Postum, piping hot, to all the family. One week's trial and it is likely that you'll never return to tea and coffee.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.
